An examination at the Mercy hospital showed six and half inches of bone in the right leg below the knee to be decayed. To-day a black and tan dog was chloroformed, its leg taken away and crushed into bits, and filled into the cavity in the boy's leg. The surgeons hope that granulation will solidify the hundred bits of bone; if not they will then attempt the theory of grafting direct from the bone of a live dog. The black and tan canine used is living and comfortable.
